

Community television coming here

Norbert Hartig

TERRACE — The city will soon have a second, local television station when Evergreen Community Television (ECT) takes to the air in early October.

ECT president Norbert Hartig said the new organization was a voluntary, non-profit group which was intended to be a completely community-driven operation. Membership in the society will be open to all residents of Terrace and Kitimat at a nominal fee likely to be in the $5-$10 per annum range.

Any who sign up would have an opportunity to become an active member of the station, he added. "That could be producing, directing, filming, editing or just coming up with the (programming) ideas," he explained.

For those who did not want to get in-involved with that side of the operation, there was also going to be a need for volunteers to take on tasks such as fundraising, Hartig added.

At the moment, programming areas to be targeted by ECT include cultural, community and sports events, entertainment, public affairs and educational programs in association with the local school district and Northwest Community College.

Hartig said the major difference between what would be found on a community as opposed to a commercial television station would be in the "live extended coverage" ECT would offer. That could include one or two hours on major events, including live coverage.

Already agreed to was a program reviewing the events of the past month, to be screened on a set day and time at the end of each month.

Although the focus would naturally be local, Hartig said Evergreen could also look at locally-produced programs dealing with broader national or international questions.

However, he emphasized, it wanted to hear from members of the two communities as to what they wanted to see on their station. "The ideas and concept should come from the people in the communities," he said.

Noting this would be the first community television operation in the northwest, Hartig said the board was "convinced the talent exists here in the northwest."

Pointing out the reference to the entire region was deliberate, he said the long-range goal was to extend its operations throughout the area.

Although the society had no equipment of its own, Northwest Community College had agreed to assist through use of its facilities at the Training and Education Centre which include a studio and production and post-production equipment.

Skeena Broadcasters was also providing the use of some of its equipment and cable channel 10 for any broadcasts.

Anyone interested in becoming involved with ECT can contact Hartig at 635-9135 or board members Tom Walker, Robert Jones, Clive Hall, Kevin Barnard and Reg Stowell.

Orenda emissions "not an issue"

TERRACE — Acid rain-causing emissions will be "a non-issue" at Orenda's proposed pulp and paper mill south of Lakelse Lake, says an Environment Canada scientist.

Dave McIlroy, the federal agency's senior forest products engineer, said Environment Canada studies of the company's original plan for a location near Stewart indicate the mill will probably live up to its environmentally clean advance billing.

"I've looked at the technology and, in my opinion, I think they've got a good proposal there and I think it's going to work," said McIlroy.

"You're still going to see it," he explained. "There will be steam coming up and a bit of an odour — from the process of grinding and cooking logs. But it isn't going to be anything like the foul odour of a kraft mill."

That's because any sulphur dioxide emissions — the main ingredient in acid rain — are expected to be a tiny fraction of what a conventional kraft pulp mill produces, he said.

"I don't consider acid rain to be a problem at all," McIlroy said. "I'm just not worried about it. I really can't see acid rain being a problem with that mill."

"The sulphur dioxide emissions will be low because the planned fuel source for the mill is natural gas. 'You don't get a lot of sulphur dioxide emissions from burning natural gas,'" he said. "I'd be surprised if it was 100 kilos a day."

That compares with 9-10 tons per day for a typical kraft mill and as much as 100 tons per day for a major mineral smelter, he said.

He also said the danger of effluent leaching out of the landfill — where solid waste from the mill is to be buried — shouldn't be a problem if the landfill is secure.

"We're calling for a properly managed landfill," he said. "If that happens I wouldn't think there's going to be much problem with leachate. They're planning to recover their effluent instead of discharging to a water body."

McIlroy said, however, the technology is new and unproven. "There is no track record on it," he said.

Environment Canada is taking the position that there should be no permit granted Orenda for the discharge of liquid effluent. "We've made it clear to them that there is to be no discharge — period."

McIlroy said his agency will be reassessing Orenda's plans when the company files its new prospectus for the new Lakelse Lake-area site sometime in August.

The B.C. Day long weekend means early news and advertising deadlines at The Terrace Standard for the Aug. 7 issue.

The deadline for contributed news copy and classified or display advertising is 12 noon Thursday.

Our office will also be closed on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, reopening at 8 a.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 6.

Ready to roll

WELL, HOPEFULLY ready anyway. Skeena Valley Car Club president Deryl Gurnsey strikes a sombre pose in front of his 1930 vintage Chevrolet truck. The problem is the starter on the venerable vehicle gave up the ghost after its last outing. However, Gurnsey wasn't really that upset about the setback — it's all part of owning such vehicles. And he says the truck will be on show tomorrow night when the club helps kick-off Riverboat Days with a display outside city hall. "Even if I have to tow it there," he adds. As many as 30 vehicles are expected to turn out for the event.

City turns off the tap again

TERRACE — Effective today, residents face restrictions on the use of garden sprinklers — the third consecutive year such measures have proved necessary.

Until further notice, residents can only use sprinklers every second day. And, depending on the weather, those restrictions could be further tightened "on very short notice," engineering director Stew Christensen cautioned.

Explaining the consumption clamp-down, he said the city water system was now drawing all the water flowing into its Deep Creek reservoir.

That amounted to 11 million litres a day, not enough to meet demand even on an overcast day and well short of the 19 million litres Terrace used when temperatures soared last Tuesday, July 23.

Although the shortfall was being made up by water drawn from the Skeena River, he pointed out the river pumps could only handle 15-16 million litres daily.

The potential problem was just a few hot days, would reduce the flow into Deep Creek and therefore the amount of water the city could draw from that source.

It would then become increasingly dependent on the Skeena supply.

That dependence would become total if a hot spell persisted because the level of the reservoir would eventually drop to the point where no more water could be taken from it — it only holds a two-day supply.

Pointing out peak demand had in the past reached as much as 25 million litres a day, Christensen said there was obviously no way the Skeena pumps could match that.

Since a major concern was to ensure there was always enough water available for firefighting purposes, he said further restrictions would be introduced as and when necessary.

"We want to act in anticipation rather than reacting to a crisis," he emphasized.

District lets Greenwood go

TERRACE — School District 88 has fired Bruce Greenwood, its personnel director.

Greenwood had been hired two years ago in part to handle contract talks and avoid the need to hire negotiators.

But he had no prior bargaining experience and school board chairman Edna Cooper said the board never had the confidence in him to allow him to lead its bargaining team.

"Things were not working out as well as expected," she said. "They came to a mutual agreement that he would leave and they worked out a deal together."

She said she didn't know how much money is being paid to Greenwood in the settlement.

"One of the problems was that Bruce didn't really fit in with the dynamics of the office," she said. "He didn't have the same type of personality as the rest of the administration."

Greenwood left last month and the school board is meeting to decide whether to hire a new personnel director and what changes, if any, to make to the job description of that position.

"It's up in the air and we're going to discuss it," Cooper said.

The board's negotiating team has been led in negotiations with teachers for the past two years by negotiator Ralph Elke, of the Richmond consulting firm Gravestock and Elke.

Northwest Roundup

KITWANGA — The Gitwanga band is bidding for part of Westar Timber's northwest holdings.

The band wants to buy the company's Kitwanga sawmill, with a sufficient wood supply for $250,000, said band spokesman Glen Williams.

They're also put in an offer of $20 million for Westar's entire northwest operation.

SMITHERS — Four people died in a July 17 float plane crash just north of Smithers.

The de Havilland Beaver — bound for a lodge in Spatsizi — went down 20 km north of Smithers in the Babine Mountains.

Dead are 40-year-old pilot

John Moyle, 39-year-old Richard Chapman and his 13-year-old son Scott, both of Smithers, and 16-year-old Chad Collingwood, of White Rock.

BURNS LAKE — Two neighbouring merchants here have declared themselves a GST-free zone.

So far the tax revolt is limited to Process 4, a Burns Lake gift and arts supply shop, and Pat's Restaurant.

The two business owners — Wayne Brown and Pat Pitman — say the Goods and Services Tax is an unfair tax, and they won't charge it.

"We are tax collectors for the government and are not getting paid," Brown said. "I won't do it."

Emissions okay

Shawn Hamilton, a habitat biologist with the Department of Fisheries and Oceans (DFO), said the agency did not identify any major threats to fish habitat with the original site.

He agreed that air emissions from the proposed mill will be small compared to conventional pulp mills.

"There certainly would be a noticeable odour right around the mill site, but nothing like a kraft mill," he said.

DFO made some recommendations for better ways to landfill the sludge to minimize potential leachate problems, he said.

But, he said, DFO's reaction to the new prospectus will depend on the new site, noting the Lakelse Lake area is "super-sensitive" fish habitat compared to the original Meziadin Junction site.

"It's a whole new ball game now," Hamilton said. "Our level of concern is certainly higher."

Tsimshian won't be a push-over

TERRACE — The president of the Tsimshian Tribal Council says Orenda Forest Products is dead wrong if it thinks Tsimshian land will be easier to build a pulp mill on than Nisga'a land.

Art Sterritt last week accused the company of moving its proposed $365-million pulp and paper mill to a site 8km south of Lakelse Lake because the Tsimshian natives of this area aren't as politically active as their Nisga'a and Gitksan neighbours to the north and east. The company's original plan to build the mill near Meziadin Junction met strong Nisga'a opposition.

"That probably has a great deal to do with their thinking," Sterritt said. "But they're not going to pick up and leave one area because the climate's not right and then try to plunk it in the middle of our territory and expect not to get a response on it."

"They're trying to shove something down our throat that we don't want — and it's not going to happen."

He said he's talked to the local Kitsumkalum and Kitselas bands about the proposed mill site, which falls within the Tsimshian land claim area.

"They've directed me to make sure we have a full public environmental review of this thing. And if that's not forthcoming, (Orenda) will see us out there when they try to construct this thing — I guarantee you."

"In the interim, we're going to be demanding we at least get intervenor funding to investigate the impacts of this on the Skeena River as well as the Kitimat system," he said.

He said the tribal council is interested in money and jobs for area natives if the project goes ahead — but only if all environmental concerns are satisfied.

"Sure we'll look at that," Sterritt said. "But that won't come at the expense of the environment. We'll be proceeding very cautiously — we're not looking for a piece of the pie."

He called the company's claims of a clean, zero-effluent mill "a smokescreen," adding the company should immediately release all the environmental studies on the project.

"I don't like the picture that they're painting," he said. "The cities of Terrace and Kitimat have jumped blindly on board this thing. We will proceed with extreme caution."

Pulp mill fined

TERRACE — Skeena Cellulose has been fined $65,000 for unlawfully polluting at its Port Edward pulp mill.

The conviction under the Waste Management Act for discharging waste into the environment follows an investigation into a June 28, 1990, spill of lime mud and slurry into the Pacific Ocean.

Provincial environmental officials and those from the federal fisheries and oceans department were involved in the investigation.

BC Parks

Heritage. One of those famous words in the English language that is difficult for most to properly define, or remember the correct spelling of.

My dictionary describes heritage as, "1: property that descends to an heir 2: LEGACY 3: BIRTHRIGHT."

Out of these three choices, my personal favorite which most adequately represents heritage would be the second: legacy because I see heritage as a continual process from which everyone benefits. In the last few decades it seems that most people have taken a stand toward the protection of the environment. I sometimes hear the reason behind this new awareness is because people don't want to leave a "legacy of pollution" for future generations.

Heritage is most often used in a historical sense, depicting artifacts or buildings that are important because they have cultural value. Heritage Village Park in Terrace provides residents and visitors with a window into which they can look and see the lifestyle of local pioneers. The Kitwanga Fort and Ksan Village are other sites which help us understand more about the first Indigenous people of the northwest: the Gitksan. BC Parks like Barkerville and Fort Steele are established to protect and enhance heritage sites. Both Barkerville and Fort Steele have staff that make the place come alive through historical drama.

Historical value is not limited to places. The Telegraph Trail which winds its way through the Bulkley Valley then turns northwest near Hazelton, is a prime example of this. The same applies to the "grease trails" which were trade routes for the Native people for thousands of years prior to the arrival of Europeans.

As Terrace celebrates its heritage in Riverboat Days, I hope you all will come out and take part in the wonderful natural and historical heritage that is yours in BC Parks.

TERRACE — While convinced the Orenda pulp mill will prove as clean as advertised, alderman Rick King says he'd still like to see the city get involved in an independent study of the proposed development.

"I'm fully support the idea of having Orenda develop in our area," he emphasized. However, tourism and fishing were also important to the local economy and therefore it would be in the city's best interests to investigate the proposal further.

Noting there had been suggestions the city appeared to be trying to "fast-track" the Orenda project, King said getting involved in such a study would help refute those.

While he was satisfied the environmental impact of the pulp mill would be "minimal", he said there was a need to alleviate fears it would prove "some kind of monster" and "give people some peace of mind."

"I don't want this development to be accompanied by animosity," he added.

King said the study could be a joint effort involving other "interested parties", the municipality of Kitimat and the Kitimat-Stikine regional district for example.

Emphasizing an independent study would not take anything away from the provincial government's Major Project Review Process, he said it would give the city "something to compare" to the MPRP findings and could also form the basis of the presentation the city would make as part of that process.

Last week's council meeting agreed to refer King's suggestion to council's next committee of the whole meeting, scheduled for Monday, Aug. 6.

Going going gone

TERRACE — Mother Nature has a way of blowing plans sky-high or, in the case of the old water tower on McConnell, into the ground.

The tower — the last of three in Terrace — was pulled down last Friday after the previous day's strong winds had set the water tank listing at a 20 degree angle.

Ironically, contractors' bids to dismantle the tower were set to close Friday at 4 p.m., said Peter Crompton, maintenance superintendent at Northwest Community College — it owns the land on which the tower stood.

When the tank's precarious position was spotted Thursday, city crews closed off that stretch of McConnell and B.C. Hydro crews took down threatened power lines.

Friday morning, two cranes from Raincoast Cranes and Equipment wrapped cables around the tank and hauled it off its base and to the ground.

Having examined the debris, city operations director John Colongard noted, "It was surprisingly sound. I was expecting to see a bit of rot in it."

The tower was erected about twenty-five years ago by the city for fire protection on upper McConnell, which at that time had no other gravity-feed water supply.

"At one time water on that bench was supplied by a relatively small 50 horsepower pump," Colongard said.

The land and the tower were sold to the college earlier this year after the city had improved the bench's water system.

"We emptied it last fall," Colongard explained, adding that the college had more than equalled the amount the tank was able to supply.

DOWN TO EARTH. That's the way it was for Terrace's last remaining water tower on McConnell beside Northwest Community College. Crews closed McConnell to traffic between Floyd and the college entrance (inset) after high winds penetrated the empty wooden tank last Thursday, causing it to lean dangerously. It was brought down by workers four hours before tenders for its demolition were supposed to have closed.

AA divided on no-smoke policy

TERRACE — A non-smoking policy has proved unhealthy for an Alcoholics Anonymous support group, according to one member.

But not all AA members agree.

The group in question meets Saturday evenings at the Mills Memorial Hospital, a regulated non-smoking area.

According to one member, most alcoholics are also smokers when they first seek help, so if the group doesn't want to lose newcomers, it has to search for a meeting place that allows smoking.

"I'm taking a new guy who's shaking and shivering, suffering withdrawal symptoms from alcohol and he's being told not to smoke," a member said.

"If someone had told me in the first few days that I wasn't allowed to smoke at a meeting I would have said thank you and goodbye," he added.

But another member said there are other AA groups smokers could attend, although she doesn't think a non-smoking policy at meeting places turns people away.

"I've never known an alcoholic personally who's gone back to drinking if he can't smoke for an hour," she said.

"If a person wants to get sober, they're going to go to any length," she added, pointing out that people can take smoke breaks and go outside.

She said AA members who do smoke but who don't want to go to the Mills meeting can form their own group.

At the moment, the only smoking AA meetings are held Friday evenings at the Kermod Friendship Centre.

Just do it!

Just exactly who is running the provincial government?

Ask yourself that question in relation to the two outstanding health care issues in the city. Both concern the Terrace Regional Health Care Society. One is the plan for supportive housing and the other is the lack of money at Mills Memorial Hospital.

And each points to the complete lack of control the Social Credit party has over the government it was elected to run.

Supportive housing is a new concept. It involves constructing 40 units beside Terraceview Lodge. They are intended as the mid point between independent living and the kind of intermediate care provided at the lodge.

This idea has been pursued by the health care society for about three years. What is wanted is a guarantee from the provincial government of the mortgage needed to provide the money to build the units.

Mills Memorial Hospital has for some years now been positioning itself as a regional health care centre. It's done that without the kind of money or official blessing needed.

The idea is that northern residents deserve the same services as those enjoyed down south. Also, providing those services at one location in the northwest is more efficient than transporting people back and forth from down south.

In both cases, the health care society has been getting precious little help from the province's elected leaders.

Ministers have given lip service to supportive housing but then defer to their bureaucrats. They say no such program exists. Consequently, there can't be supportive housing. Nice and tidy. End of story.

Mills Memorial Hospital has been told by the government what it can spend this year. That amount seems to be based on the hospital serving only the city and not the area. But the hospital has been denied the information upon which the government made its decision. Tough luck. Lay off nurses and close beds.

And what is government's response when faced by a huge outcry from northwesterners about the lack of money? Hire someone from outside government to make the decision for them.

Each of these examples obviously concerns money. Modern health care is expensive. That's why new ideas are needed to spend what is there more efficiently.

It would be cheaper by about $1 million a year to have supportive housing than to place the people who would live there in intermediate care.

Establishing a regional health care centre is more cost effective — not to mention humane — than shipping people back and forth from down south.

Instead, Social Credit cabinet ministers — those same people who say they live and die by the bottom line — hide behind the civil servants who work for them — and, theoretically at least, for us.

Skeena MLA Dave Parker admitted as much during a recent television interview. He said he supports the hospital and so does health minister Bruce Strachan. But those nasty bureaucrats with their computers and formulae don't.

Can these be the same guys who last year paid for a health care study which recommended more regional control over all facets of health care?

Can these be the same guys who very soon are going to ask for your vote after 16 years of saying they have provided good government?

And can these be the same guys to whom the multi-thousand name petition supporting the hospital was sent?

If they say they need this kind of hammer to bring in policies which should be common sense, then perhaps we need a new bunch of carpenters.

Courts drag feet on enviro-fines

VICTORIA — Say what you will about the Socreds, they are taking the industrial assault on our environment seriously.

As recently as five years ago, it would have been all but impossible for this "free-enterprise government" to publicly go after big business. These are, after all, the Socreds' soul brothers who have been instrumental in keeping them in office for 36 of the past 39 years.

But times have changed. The latest list of major industrial polluters, released last week by Environment Minister Dave Mercer, has some powerful names on it, including Alcan, Cominco, B.C. Packers, Eurocan Pulp and Paper, Fletcher Challenge, Imperial Oil, MacMillan Bloedel, Skeena Cellulose and Western Pulp. More than 100 companies and municipalities are on the list, and 39 of them are repeat offenders. And while that may indicate a certain reluctance on the part of these companies and towns to mend their ways there is another aspect to the hit list. Some previous offenders have cleaned up their act and are no longer on the list.

Both the Greater Vancouver and Capital Regional districts are on the list of offenders for dumping raw sewage into the ocean. Both districts have been warned by tourism officials that failure to remedy the situation could seriously threaten the rich tourism markets of Vancouver and Victoria.

The current list is the third one released by the environment ministry. The two previous ones came out in July and December 1990. Mercer said that 58 companies and local governments have been dropped from the December list.

The minister congratulated those firms and municipalities, and rightly so. They went through the trouble of making the necessary changes, at considerable cost in some cases. Needless to say that the publication of the list has raised the ire of some of the companies fingered. Jim Matkin of the Business Council of B.C. claimed that there is "an element of deception in publishing the list."

Matkin said a firm may be technically in breach of some complicated pollution standard rather than be guilty of a clear offence, involving, for example, the dumping of chemical compounds into the environment.

Chevron Canada is one of the companies identified for "significant non-compliance of Waste Management Permits." The list says Chevron "exceeded its permit for pH, oil and grease and suspended solids" at its Burnaby refinery, but Dave Reed, vice-president and refinery manager, said it was "unreasonable" that Chevron was placed on the list.

"What we have been listed for is rain water, which falls on our property and on the hill behind us. It has nothing to do with our refining process. If tap water were subjected to the same permit requirements, it would not meet the specifications Chevron is required to meet on this rain water runoff," Reed said.

But Ann Hillyer, a staff lawyer with the West Coast Environmental Law Association, said the lists are valuable because the public can look for regional hotspots or industry-wide problems and see what government is doing to make firms comply with its pollution laws.

And speaking of what government is doing, the one glaring weakness in the government's efforts to bring industrial polluters to heel are the relatively low fines the courts have been imposing.

The maximum fine for at least half of the offences that landed the firms and municipalities on the hit list is $1 million, but the combined fines for 119 convictions didn't amount to that figure.

In only 20 cases, the fines exceeded $1,000, while three were in the $100,000 range. The largest fine was $275,000 against Cariboo Pulp and Paper in Quesnel.

Clearly, in most cases, the fines imposed by the courts are no deterrent, but that will change. Our courts have always been slow in catching up to society's concerns.

It took judges years to impose stiff penalties for drunk driving, even though the laws provided for them. And the furor over a number of judgments involving physical and sexual abuse offences also shows that the public expects more from the courts.

Eventually, we will see stiffer fines, perhaps even jail sentences for gross violations of environmental laws. In some European countries company executives have already been sent to jail for brief periods to make it clear that society no longer tolerates industrial pollution.

But it would be naive to expect too much too soon. The important thing is that governments recognize the public's concerns and act accordingly.

Like I said, even five years ago, no Social Credit government would have hung any big company out to dry in public. The people who kept the wheels of the economy oiled could do no wrong. It was public pressure that brought about the change. The smart money is responding and getting off the hit list fast.

Farewell free speech

Soon, comedians and creators of commercial ads will be hard put to find a safe topic to spoof. Every day we whittle freedom of speech rushing to demonstrate our sensitivity.

The Prince Edward Island potato marketing commission was steamed when a Weight Watchers of Canada TV ad showed a woman holding a burlap sack of potatoes with P.E.I. stamped across the front. The dieter confessed, "I guess four years ago, I looked like a sack of potatoes."

Potato growers felt the ad made viewers think potatoes cause weight gain — and that's not true. While the commission stopped short of asking Weight Watchers to pull the ad, they were miffed no one had asked their okay.

Halifax's Kentucky Fried Chicken shops advertised a "hot meal deal" using a TV ad of a man dressed as a devil. The ads were pulled after viewer protests about using Satan to promote products. A Nova Scotia church group called the ad "disgusting and offensive."

Recently the Victoria regional transit commission forced B.C. Lotteries to cancel a TV ad they deemed in poor taste, featuring a female rider on a crowded bus lending her shoulder to a male passenger who had fallen asleep.

When she hears that B.C. Provincial Lottery is giving away five new cars, she brightens. "I could be the owner of a new Chrysler instead of a pillow for Rip Van Winkle."

The transit commission noted since several government departments were also trying to increase use of public transit to ease traffic and environmental problems, "Ads portraying buses as uncomfortable and crowded send the wrong message."

For a time, McDonald's ran a TV ad of Ali Baba as a satisfied customer. Muslims objected. In a flash, the ad disappeared from TV.

Last week a Vancouver babysitting service groused that a new Sprite commercial portrays teenage sitters a party animals rather than responsible guardians.

The ad shows an impromptu party breaking out as soon as the parent leave the house. When the mother suddenly returns for forgotten tickets, the party evidence is hastily hidden, except for the pizza on the ceiling.

A spokesperson for the babysitting service says, "We get a lot of skepticism about teen sitters. What Sprite has done is perpetuate the idea that a teen sitter is all set to have a good time in your house at your expense, bring a boyfriend over, spend time on the phone, and neglect the kids."

The wonder is so few consumer complaints can kill even expensive ads. "Ten opinions on one person's desk do make a difference," says Sally Armstrong, editor of Homemaker's magazine. In response to readers' letters, she pulled a four-page Kraft food ad showing four foods and four men as "dishes."

If only we could steer government, too, by wallet.

Demonstration forest takes root

A learning experience for all

TERRACE — Members of the public won't be the only ones to learn more about forests and forestry at the Red Sand demonstration forest up the West Kalum Road.

Noting different spacing methods, stocking levels and logging methods will be tried there, forest service silviculturist Art Moi emphasized, "It's a working, experimental forest, too."

While in some cases similar trials will already have been carried out elsewhere, he pointed out the results were not necessarily applicable to this area.

"It's nice to know what's going to happen in your own neck of the woods," he said.

One of the trials will involve trees being planted in a spiral, rather like a catherine wheel.

At the centre, the trees would be planted just six inches apart. That spacing would increase the further away from the centre the planting was done and the distance between the curls of the spiral would also become greater.

This, Moi explained, would show the effects of competition on growth rates. The end result should see at the centre slender trees the lower branches of which have died off while those on the outer edges would be larger in diameter with full branches all the way to ground level.

"It's nice to know what's going to happen in your neck of the woods."

"In 20 years, you'll really see the difference," he added.

The effect of competition was also behind plans to carry out juvenile spacing and commercial thinning projects.

Pointing out any soil could only grow a finite volume of wood, he said reducing the number of stems on a site meant fewer trees competing for the same nutrients.

That in turn would translate to larger trees which was important in logging because "the fewer pieces of wood you have to move, the less expensive it is."

If the stand was left as it was, he added, many trees would eventually die off anyway as they lost the battle for nutrients and moisture.

Juvenile spacing referred to work carried out in 10-20 year-old stands while the commercial thinning would involved salvaging merchantable wood in 50-60 year-old stands of lodgepole pine.

While this work will be carried out in the operational portion of the forest, Moi said visitors taking the Red Sand introduction trail will come across sections where one side of the trail had been thinned to 800-900 stems per hectare while the other had been left untouched.

Next year trials will begin on spacing plus fertilization and here again only one side of the trail will be treated in that way.

However, before any fertilization takes place, samples of foliage will be taken and analyzed to determine what nutrients are missing and what then limits the growth of trees.

Noting much of the soil in the Red Sand was sandy, Moi said the lack of nutrients was confirmed by a "shutdown" in growth after 30 years. Evidence of that was seen in the rings of pine trees cut down to clear the trails.

As for harvesting methods, there could eventually be examples of clearcutting, selective logging and possibly the selection and shelterwood systems.

Emphasizing selective logging did not mean removing only the big trees from a stand, Moi said that approach would only create problems in the future.

"If you keep cutting the stronger, faster growing ones, you ruin the gene pool that produces those tree characteristics."

Taking out diseased trees would be a priority in the selective system, he added.

The selection system, he explained, involved removing some trees in each diameter class throughout the stand. This amounted to thinning in the case of the small trees and harvesting with the larger ones.

Because the objective was to ensure a continuous canopy on the site and at three age-class levels, "You need the right kind of stand."

The shelterwood system left 25-30 large trees per hectare to provide shade and protection for the nurse crop underneath.

"Shelterwood hasn't really been tried around here but it is something the forest service is seriously looking at," Moi said.

He emphasized the type of harvesting used and where it was done at Red Sand would depend on the characteristics of the individual site.

To do otherwise would not give a true result and be "poor forestry," he added.

BEGINNING OF THE END. Forest service silviculturist Art Moi points out a pine tree damaged by axe cuts — allow wind-borne fungal spores to invade the tree. Once the fungi have taken hold, it's only a matter of time before the tree dies. People are asked to bear that in mind when they are out at Red Sand, or elsewhere in the bush for that matter.

Trails provide insight

Red Sand Lake demonstration forest is located on 349ha of land 26km north of Terrace on the West Kalum Road.

That road forms the western boundary of the forest until it reaches the Nelson River which then becomes the boundary to its outfall into Kitsumkalum Lake, the northernmost point of the forest.

The Kitsumkalum River, including Red Sand and Treston Lakes, mark out the eastern edge of site which reaches as far south as the wetlands adjacent to Treston Lake.

Both the 1.6km introduction trail (now completed) and the 4.3km operations trail (to be finished next year) begin at the recreational campsite on the shores of Red Sand Lake.

Already roughed in is the 1.5km Lookout Hill trail. It begins about halfway round the introduction trail and will be third to be completed.

Plans call for construction of two more trails, one through the southern wetlands and the other to the Nelson River delta.

The forest contains pine, spruce, cedar and hemlock trees plus deciduous species such as willow, alder, cottonwood and birch.

Spring-fed ponds and the many side channels off the river and lakes are productive fish habitat and home to juvenile coho, threespine sticklebacks and prickly sculpins. Juvenile chinook are found along the lakeshore.

Squirrels are the most evident wildlife in the forest, but there are also rabbits and moose. Deer have been spotted there this spring.

Logging proposal would close mills

CLEARCUTS MARCH towards the horizon in this view over the Kispox Valley, north of Hazelton. In its latest treatise on the forest industry and its practices, the Village of Hazelton says it wants to see new rules which will make such scenes a thing of the past.

TERRACE — Sawmills and pulp mills will close if the Village of Hazelton's latest blueprint for forestry practices is adopted, says a Kitimat-Stikine regional district director.

That was the warning sounded by New Hazelton director Pete Weeber when the district recently debated whether to approve in principle the village's Framework for Watershed Stewardship.

The document is a follow-up to and based on responses received from the village's Forest Industry Charter of Rights released in January of last year.

Among the changes the new document proposes is a 10ha limit on the size of clearcuts and a 20-year moratorium on further harvesting within one kilometre of that original cutblock.

While agreeing there were many good ideas in new document, Weeber said he was concerned by the potential repercussions of those two proposals.

Intrigued to find out what that would mean to logging, Weeber said he had examined the effect on a notional forest area one kilometre square — 100ha.

Using the Framework's guidelines, no more trees could be taken out of that 100ha area for 20 years. By extension, the rule also meant the last portion of the square could not be cut until 200 years after the original harvest.

By that time, Weeber said, "all the pine and spruce will have died of old age" and the only trees left would be "over-mature hemlock."

Weeber said he took his findings to a registered professional forester to see if the calculations were correct.

The forester told Weeber the calculations were incorrect and too "simplistic."

Weeber said the forester pointed out that what would happen within one square affected cutting in adjacent ones. In other words, the 20-year cutting ban would affect a four kilometre square area surrounding the original cut.

Recalling the forester had calculated that meant a 480 year and not a 200-year rotation, Weeber said two tree crops would have been lost by then.

Estimating the annual allowable cut would be reduced by 80 per cent if the system was adopted, he said the inevitable result would be the closure of mills.

"I think you have to be careful not to accept things at face value," said Weeber in emphasizing that 60 per cent of the economic activity — 70 per cent in his community — depended on the forest industry.

Hazelton regional district director and village mayor Alice Maitland responded to Weeber's criticisms by saying it had talked with a lot of professional foresters in preparing its blueprint.

Prior to its release, she added, college and university forestry program instructors had been asked to edit the Framework.

Declaring she was proud of the document, Maitland added, "We don't want to kill our industry."

However, she warned, "After the trees are gone, you can't get them back."

The regional board voted to endorse the Framework, with qualifications, and send a copy to the premier and forests minister along with a "strong recommendation" for the overhaul of the province's forest industry.

Abortion response

Dear Sir:

Regarding the letter from Ron & Brigitte Bartlett in the June 19 issue of The Standard.

They say things so neat and tidy, have it all planned out.

Sure, a few adopt, but what about the young teen. You shoulder their troubled minds and frightening experiences.

Wise up. No one wants to see or feel an abortion. But no one wants to see a child grow up, going from foster home to foster home, always wondering who he or she really belonged to, and why he or she wasn't wanted.

I, the same as a great many other people, still say you are spotlight seekers and don't know of any other way to steal the spotlight.

You are uncaring, cravers of the limelight. Grow up, and do something worthwhile.

Rebuttal needed

Dear Sir:

A note of thanks for printing the Bartlett's letter of response to the previous anti-Prolife letter of Adriane Stewart.

I was so glad the misinformation of Stewart's letter was corrected. Those who love life, truly do and care for their families and others in a beautiful loving way.

May I suggest we all check our hearts and motivations and thank God for all we have and are and direct our words and actions from His word.

Sincerely,

Picketers off base

Dear Sir:

Abortion has always been a major controversial issue and could easily go either way concerning the correct conclusion.

I have always been interested in this topic and have come to many different decisive resolutions. I am not at all for abortion but do not believe in picketers. I have kept up to date with Adriane's article June 5 and Marion's article June 26, both of which introduced great issues.

We, as Canadians must ask ourselves "what is our ultimate challenge?" To have eternal life? I think we sometimes must learn to accept death no matter what the age.

Signs insensitive think they are? I am quite sure these girls pursuing this route, have reason for what they are doing. It is probably hard enough for them to decide what to do in their predicament, they don't need more pressure from insensitive nobody's holding signs saying "They kill babies here."

Marion Schlegel stated that her husband and her have been waiting to adopt a baby for a long time, but then adopted a special needs boy now 6½ years of age.

If you wanted a child so badly why wait. Go to Vancouver and walk down the streets at night, there are plenty of children to choose from, to take unto your home. These children are titled "street kids", some of which are runaways and the rest unwanted and abused children.

They eat at soup kitchens and sleep in disgusting, unhealthy places like abandoned buildings and under bridges, etc.

This is a prime example of people choosing not to abort the child but at the same time not wanting the responsibility of it either. Is this what we want for the children that are presently being aborted?

Not all of the children are placed in good homes. Recently on the news a young girl look her newborn baby to a welfare counsellor and said she didn't want to keep it any longer. But Welfare told her she had to keep the baby so later on that week she killed the baby and threw it in the dumpster.

Who do we blame that on? She probably felt intimidated by you picketers and kept the baby. When no one wanted it she got rid of it her own way.

I don't think anyone has the right to tell someone they are immoral because they have chosen to have an abortion.

Have all you picketers signed up to adopt a child? If not how come? Is it because you don't want one? Can't afford one? You don't have the time, patience or even desire to raise a child?

People are so busy trying to make another person feel guilty, yet I don't see anyone jumping up and volunteering to babysit. Why haven't you picketers opened your doors to these girls confronted with this perplexity.

Money can buy almost anything but it cannot buy love.

I feel direct therapeutic abortion which removes the child from its environment and causes its death shouldn't be contemplated except for the most serious reasons but this is just my opinion.

Pickers must stop and think, "Is this the hill they want to die on?" Stop being hypocrites and put their time and energy to use.

Who or what is a Canadian?

Dear Sir:

What does it mean to be a "Canadian"? Is there such an entity, identity? And if there is, what or whom is it?

In one aspect, one could, and would, have a difficult time in trying to explain this phenomenon. In another, with great ease.

In either case, of late, whether from British Columbia, Quebec, or Newfoundland, etc. there are some citizens of these regions who feel out of touch, out of place, and alienated, in reference to any of these "other" regions. Which, of course, is supposedly one geographical area (or entity), which is called Canada.

Now, there are certain individuals, groups, etc., whom would have you and me think otherwise. I often wonder what their motives or rationale is behind this pop-pocok dribble. Could it possibly be that the enticement of power, ruling, controlling, and manipulating of the often thoughtful, caring, and concerned citizens of this country to the brink of believing such gullibly and non-sensical diatribe; driving them into thinking that we, as Canadians, can so easily be duped.

I suppose that, in part, they may be correct! The FTA and GST issues certainly come to mind and are of a constant reminding sort.

In the past, peoples from every country in the world have immigrated to this enlightening country, and are continuing to do so, and for all the best reasons in the world.

One does not often hear of immigrants emigrating to where they may have come from, although certain individuals may wish them to do so, conveniently forgetting, or failing to mention, that our descendants historically, have come from "outside".

Due to the immense diversity of Canada, I've often felt that I was not just a Canadian citizen, but also an international one, which has led me, and many others as well, to tolerance and understanding.

There are few countries in the world that can lay claim to such a humanitarian status. Ergo Canada; ergo Canadian.

And therefore, no one can, nor will, take this away from me or you.

Wedeene sale depends on stumpage money

TERRACE — The provincial forest service will probably be the only creditor to receive all of the money owed it arising from the sale of Wedeene River Timber's Prince Rupert sawmill, says a court-appointed receiver.

Colin Rogers of Peat, Marwick, Thorne said the forest service will approve the transfer of the forest licence that is part of the sales agreement with Eurocan only if it gets $1.2 million in back stumpage payments.

The mill went into receivership last fall after it ran up debts of nearly $18 million. Closing date for Eurocan to pay nearly $7 million for the mill and licence is Aug. 30.

Rogers said the back stumpage payment option is a standard condition of any cutting licence transfer.

Once the forest service receives its money, three secured creditors are in line for their share.

But they won't receive anything close to what is owed because the sale price doesn't come close to matching the debt, said Rogers.

The largest of those creditors is the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce which is owed $8 million, the federally-owned Federal Business Development Bank which is owed $4 million and the provincially-controlled B.C. Enterprise Corporation which is owed $1.2 million.

"The court will decide who gets the money and that'll happen after the sale is final. It's not the job of the receiver to decide that," said Rogers.

He added that the B.C. Enterprise Corporation feels it should get all that is due because it obtained security before the other secured creditors did. That position is being disputed the other secured creditors.

Rogers held out little hope that preferred creditors owed $300,000 or unsecured ones owed $2.3 million will get any money.

"There's simply a substantial shortfall to the secured creditors as it is," he said.

In the meantime, a team of West Fraser engineers — it's an equal partner with Enso Forest Products in Eurocan — is at the Wedeene site this week examining what's needed to bring the mill back into production.

One factor under consideration is adding machinery to cut larger size logs, says West Fraser senior vice president Gary Townsend.

That was one reason given by the Williams family, which owns Wedeene Timber, for the mill not generating enough revenue to pay its bills.

"It might not be necessary," said Townsend of the larger log capability. "We'll be looking at any number of plans."

"We are committed to starting up that mill. It just wasn't designed to cut the profile (of the logs) it has to," Townsend continued in adding it should be running by next year.

When Wedeene River went into receivership last fall, the Williams family said it was being hurt because the provincial government wouldn't allow it to export its larger logs overseas.

Revenues from those sales were to go to buying machinery so the mill could cut those logs.

But the provincial government did relieve Wedeene of a condition of its forest licence which said it must operate the sawmill.

That allowed Wedeene to export up to 20,000 cubic metres a year until 1992.

Water sprinkling is permitted during the following times:

ODD NUMBERED HOUSES — ON ODD DAYS OF THE MONTH

EVEN NUMBERED HOUSES — ON EVEN DAYS OF THE MONTH

We request that all sprinkling be done during the early morning or late evening hours. Further restrictions, if necessary, may be imposed on short notice. We thank you for your assistance in sensible and moderate use of water at this time.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Tour business launched

TERRACE — A new sightseeing venture goes into operation this week.

Greening Tours, run by Bev Greening, 57, of Thornhill, is a charter tour service where the customer selects the route within a 400-mile radius of Terrace.

That covers an area west to the Queen Charlotte Islands, north to Dease Lake and east to Prince George.

"I feel that it's a service we need," Greening said, "because there isn't anything of the sort in the area. People have made inquiries before," she added.

Greening will pick customers up within 25 miles of Terrace, which is useful to campers, she said.

The charter does not include accomodation or meals.

"I'm transportation only," she explained.

Two years have passed since she first decided to create the service — just before retiring from teaching elementary school — and today she returns from a trial run to the Queen Charlotte Islands with the hiking club.

For now she is cautious about the future of her business, not wanting to speculate about it.

"I would just like to see how things go. The future's very unpredictable — it's difficult to know how much business I'm going to get, how far I'm going to go. There's still a lot to learn and I'm willing to learn it."

However, she says she has received much positive feedback to the idea.

OUT AND ABOUT

TERRACE — Rumours may be abounding over plans by Overwaitea to expand or relocate its store here, but they remain unfounded.

A company spokesman said last week Overwaitea is still considering a number of options.

"We're continuing to examine Terrace but we have no firm plans or commitments at this time," said Cheryl Gerhardt.

The company is rumoured to be looking at expanding its Skeena Mall store out into the parking lot and adding another storey or moving altogether to a new location in the city.

A decline in the company's earnings and "the uncertain outlook for the future" has prompted Alcan to reduce the quarterly dividend paid on its common shares.

The company last week declared a 15 cents U.S. dividend for the second quarter of 1991 — that compares to the 28 cents paid out in each of the previous 10 quarters.

The dividend will be paid Sept. 20 to those holding shares at the close of business Aug. 20.

Two companies have been invited to submit detailed proposals for the North Coast region road maintenance contract.

O'Brien Road and Bridge Maintenance — current holder of the contract — and Don Hull and Sons Construction have until Aug. 7 to submit their bid prices and management plans.

The North Coast area takes in Prince Rupert and extends north almost to Stewart. It includes 568km of road and 61 bridges. With the current contract set to expire Dec. 14, the Highways ministry anticipates concluding a new agreement by early fall.

Dumped mail prompts post office inquiry

TERRACE — The local Canada Post office is launching an investigation to determine how some mail came to be dumped behind the packer machine on the east end of the Overwaitea building.

Skeena Mall employee Tony Ippel said he found the mail Friday morning during a routine tour of the mall site. "I saw a card lying there, got suspicious and so had a closer look."

That closer look turned up about a number of letters, a postcard and several change of address cards. Ippel said the letters, some of which appeared to have been opened, were addressed and stamped but the stamps had not been cancelled, indicating they had not reached the post office.

He said he then telephoned the post office and supervisor Linda Karlash came down immediately to collect the wayward post.

Later, when showing a Terrace Standard reporter the location of the find, Ippel retrieved more sodden letters — invitations sent out by local resident Carol Lomas — underneath the machine. None of them were in their original envelopes.

Lomas confirmed she had dropped 29 such letters into the mail box outside the Skeena Mall on July 12. "I was beginning to wonder why no-one had replied," she added.

Confirming the find, Karlash said it was being reported and an investigation would follow. It would probably take a week to complete, she added.

THE MYSTERY of why no-one was replying to invitations to a party was solved for one local resident when Skeena Mall employee Tony Ippel (above) discovered them lying with other mail behind the Overwaitea building. Postal officials will now try and solve the mystery of how the mail got there.

She also confirmed there had been no report of any break-in at the mall mail box.

Helipad grant okayed

TERRACE — The provincial government has come up with a $25,057 grant towards the cost of constructing a heli-pad at the New Aiyansh health clinic.

In announcing the Air Transport Assistance program (ATAP) grant, Highways minister Lyall Hanson noted "helicopter transport of patients is often preferred due to the long road links to medical care in Terrace and other locations."

Also receiving ATAP money is the Atlin district airport society which plans to use the $160,000 to carry out apron and taxiway reconstruction, approach clearing, power line relocation and drainage improvements.

CITY BEAT

Dump review sought

The chamber of commerce has asked the city to consider extending the local landfill's hours of operation.

Noting the gates were currently open from noon to 8 p.m. only, chamber president Sharon Taylor said latecomers were dumping garbage in private driveways and side roads off Kalum Lake Drive.

"Many people are working in their yards and around their homes later in the evening," she pointed out. For that reason, the chamber suggested the dump remain open, at least for the summer months, until 10 or 11 p.m.

In asking the matter be referred to today's planning and public works committee meeting, alderman Bob Cooper pointed out extending the hours would likely require hiring another attendant. That, in turn, would drive up landfill operational costs.

Uplands sewer okayed

Instead of spending $30,000 on a sewage disposal system for its planned Uplands Elementary school expansion, School District 88 has offered to contribute that money towards the cost of connecting the school to the city system.

While agreeing to the hook-up request, council noted it would be part of a planned extension of the city sewer lines into that neighbourhood. The city is still waiting to hear whether a provincial grant for the project has been approved.

Council and school district officials will meet in the near future to discuss the proposal further.

Washroom planned

Terrace Youth Soccer is ready to move to phase three of its Christy Park project — the construction of washroom and changing facilities on the site.

Spokesman Don Highe said TYS would pay for the cost of the building on the understanding the city would take responsibility for maintenance thereafter.

Noting "the location of this facility will likely be a very sensitive issue," Highe requested a meeting with the recreation committee to discuss the type of building planned and its positioning at the park.

Dan Farrell

Agent named

TERRACE — Unionized carpenters and piledrivers have a new business agent.

Dan Farrell from Kitimat took over from John Jensen, who has retired, at the beginning of the month.

Farrell has lived in the northwest for 20 years and most recently was a shop steward at the Kemano Completion Project.

His territory covers the area from Terrace to Kitimat to Burns Lake.

It takes in two carpenters union locals and one representing piledrivers together called the B.C. North West District Council of Carpenters.

All told that's about 150 people, 140 of whom are now unemployed, says Farrell. The great majority of northwest carpenters had been working at Kemano until Alcan reduced construction activity there.

Kitselas trails examined

TERRACE — Parks Canada officials have spent the last couple of weeks at Kitselas Canyon looking at potential trail sites for a park the Kitselas band wants to develop.

The location east of Terrace on the Skeena River is the historic home of the band.

From that location, the band was able to control river trade between the coast and the interior.

A white settlement also took root there in the latter part of the last century and the first part of this century when river boats plied the Skeena between Prince Rupert and Hazelton.

Band economic development officer Wilfred McKenzie said the area has been designated but not officially declared a national historic site.

"Parks Canada has been looking at trails. There are some depressions in the area that we need to find out about. We want to make sure we don't interfere with an important area when we build the trails," he said.

The band first wants to build a centre to help explain the significance of the Kitselas Canyon before going into full scale trail development, McKenzie added.

Those trails will be of varying length and each will have signs and other information along the way.

"We see the park being developed in three phases. It's definitely a long term commitment," McKenzie continued.

THANK YOU TERRACE & REGION!

Thank you Terrace & Region for the overwhelming support you have shown towards Mills Memorial Hospital.

The Minister of Health's announcements on July 22nd are viewed by the Regional Health Care Society Board as being very positive.

- 1) Mills is a regional health referral centre.
- 2) The Ministry will fund the cost of an independent consultant's review of the Hospital's operations.
- 3) The Ministry of Health will increase the Hospital's budget if that is what the Consultant recommends.

What this means for Terrace and the Hospital is that the closed beds will be reopened after the normal summer bed closures are over on September 3rd. All layoffs planned as a result of bed closures are now cancelled.

Thanks for your support Terrace and for over 12,000 signatures on the petition! We depend on you and with your continued support the health care services available from Mills will continue to improve as our regional role continues to develop.

Youth Corps to tackle trail and fish projects

TERRACE — Hiking trail improvements, creek clean-ups, and salmon stock inventories top the list of Environmental Youth Corps projects in the Terrace area for 1991.

Victoria approved a series of projects in this area last week — about a month and a half later than last year.

A series of forestry- and fishery-related projects will be jointly organized and contracted out by the Steelhead Society and Skeena Cellulose, which contributed $10,000.

Steelhead Society spokesman Jim Culp said the planned projects include:

- Layout and initial construction of a new hiking trail to Gunsight Peak, immediately southeast of Lakelse Lake.
- Upgrading of the trail, access and signs at the Sleeping

Beauty Mountain hiking trail.

- Improvements to the picnic site on Hwy16 east at Skeena Cellulose's Skeena West site, near its new bridge.

- Improved access to the Pine Lakes trail and campsite on the West Kalum forestry road.

- Posting of signs to the fossil beds in the Upper Copper River valley, about 45km up the Copper River road.

- Clean-up of the Eby Street fish hatchery, which was affected when some of its rearing ponds were flooded by a mud slide during spring runoff.

- Collection of coho and chinook salmon brood stock from Erlandsen Creek for the Deep Creek hatchery.

- Measurement of fish stocks in small streams and tributaries

Lakelse and Copper River watersheds.

Approval was also given for a Kitimat-Stikine regional district project to clean up Hurly Creek, and for a B.C. Parks project to improve park facilities at Lakelse Lake provincial park.

"The program is really a good idea," Culp said.

Young people are by the successful contractors, and carry out the projects.

Competition for project approval was keen, with more than 350 proposals received.

Young people aged 16-24 who are interested in joining crew, and individuals and organizations with project proposals can call the Environmental Youth Corps hotline at 1-800-663-0340.

Scenic spots tagged

TERRACE — The forest service is working on guidelines to blend logging with preserving scenery along area highways.

A consultant has identified scenic spots along nearly 600 km of highways 16 and 37 and those findings have been passed along to forest district offices for comments, says a forest service spokesman.

Those spots have been labelled as high, medium or low sensitivity, says Lloyd Davies.

And attached to them are objectives of how much or what kind of logging should take place and still keep scenic values intact, he added.

"The object is not to say there won't be any logging, but the goal is to try and design the meet the objective set," said Davies.

"This is not a plan for a moratorium on logging on Hwy 16 — it would have too much of an impact on our region," he continued.

Among the types of areas surveyed were views of the Seven Sisters range toward Kitwanga and scenery from campgrounds, rest stops and residences.

"The term we used is visual absorption capability — there could be natural openings and outcroppings, for instance, in which logging could take place that's not readily apparent," said Davies.

In doing so, the kind of logging could be selective as opposed to clear cut, smaller blocks than originally planned or tapered to follow contours and sight lines.

Davies said the kind of cutting envisioned — typically called landscape logging — can involve the use of computers to provide an idea of what will be seen after the trees have been cut.

Information fed into the program can provide views of a planned logging show from different viewing positions, he said.

This kind of scenic assessment has been done elsewhere in the province but is the largest to date, said Davies.

He expects plans to be ready for public viewing early next year.

Cutblock said too visible

Dan Tuomi

TERRACE — A logging operation visible from the highway leading toward Terrace didn't turn out as planned, says a spokesman from the company which did the work.

Dan Tuomi of Skeena Cellulose said more of the cutting is visible than was first estimated.

He expects the company to return to the area this winter to "feather" what is now a fairly distinct horizontal line that marks where logging stopped.

"The final result was not exactly what we had in mind," said Tuomi. "We hope to modify that this winter."

Skeena Cellulose does have a computer modelling program which gives it an idea of what an area will look like after it has been logged.

But the kind of information needed on the area cut wasn't available and the company used maps and manual methods instead, said Tuomi.

"We did use sight lines and a lot of photographs. We knew we were fairly close to a (nearby) recreational site," he added.

"We actually had guys go into the bush and up the hill to establish those sight lines," Tuomi continued.

Students show fears

TERRACE — Nine theatre students marked the end of their three week workshop at the Aurora Summer School of the Arts last week with the performance of a play they created themselves.

The piece gave the young actors a chance to share their fears and dreams with an audience, something they might not normally be able to do, said instructor Teri Snelgrove of Vancouver.

"When I came here I was trying to think about what was interesting for them that they don't get a chance to talk about publicly," she said. I don't think adults ask them much about (their fears)."

She asked them to write down what they had dreamt at night or what they were afraid of, and then shape that into a monologue.

She said she was surprised at the differences in their fears and hers when she was the same age.

"I'm fascinated as the generations grow up how the dreams and hopes and fears change," she said. "They're more exposed to the word than I was. Some of them are afraid of more global issues — the environment, power."

Power is the subject of Prince George student Andrew Halladay's monologue that grew out of a dream he had about Alice in Wonderland getting her head cut off at the Queen of Hearts' command.

"Then I look at the queen," the fourteen-year-old Halladay said, "and say, 'Off with your head.' And so they cut off her head and the cheshire cat appears on her and sort of sits there."

Halladay said he has no idea where the dream came from.

"I guess it sort of shows that I had power because the queen gets her head cut off and I like having power."

Other subjects the play dealt with were fears of rejection and rape.

Snelgrove said she was pleased with her students, and with the progress they had made.

"They're hyper, they're talkative, but we have lots of fun," she said. "I really do think they created some fantastic material. Some had said (at the beginning) they aren't creative and I hope what they've found is that they can be creative and make their voice heard."

Six of the teenage students were from Terrace, one from Kitimat, one from Hazelton and one from Prince George.

This was the first year for the Aurora Summer School of the Arts.

Courses were offered in weaving, spinning, music, theatre and art, and the approximately 70 students, ranging in age from 12 to 70, came from as far away as Gabriola Island in the Gulf Islands and as near as Terrace.

Rain or shine

The new awnings at the Farmers Market are up just in time for the summer sun. But, while they wait for it, vendors are happy to use them to shield that persistent summer rain.

Vesta was missed

While volunteering at the blood donor clinic I happened to chat with a fellow resting after he had given blood.

He sat on the cot looking concerned, so I asked if everything was alright. He replied, "Yes, but there is something missing here. Vesta Douglas is not here."

He was right. You see, Vesta injured her knee and has been confined to her home because she cannot walk.

I'm sure many people around have missed seeing her.

Hurry and get better, Vesta.

The Queen Charlotte Islands' museum recently showed the work of artist Irene Harner.

The show contained 17 pieces of island landscapes, including eagles and illustrations of the beautiful Haida blankets and dancers, as well as watercolours of flowers.

The reception on Saturday, June 15 was well attended and made even more special by the presence of famous Haida artist Bill Reid.

Irene's show ran through July 13.

Irene was able to make this show possible thanks to a grant for self-employment she received in November 1990.

A long time resident of Braun's Island has passed away. Marie Helene Schulmeister ("Aurore") was born on Feb. 19, 1931 in Spruce Grove Alberta to her parents Alma and Emal Girard.

As a seventeen-year-old Aurore met Joseph Schulmeister at a dance at Owlseye Hall.

Joe said she was a great polka dancer.

The couple was married Aug. 24, 1948 in St. Paul's Alberta, and the love they shared all the years together was an inspiration and an envy to many.

After a stop at the coal branch at Luscar for a couple of years, they moved to St. Paul's for the birth of their third child.

They moved to Terrace in 1956, where they settled on Braun's Island's Heppel Rd., on a farm bought from Mr. Heppel.

And over the years many area residents have gone out there for fresh garden vehicles.

She worked eight years in the kitchen at Skeenview — now Terraceview Lodge.

Aurore started to care for children at a very young age.

When her mother passed away she became mother to her younger brothers and sisters, with the help of her sister Terry. Her home was always full of children.

And in 1963, when she was expecting her seventh child, her doctor detected a disturbing heart murmur on a routine checkup.

She went to Mills Memorial Hospital and stayed for 3 and a half months, until her baby Martin was born.

Parnell bids farewell

Sadie Parnell leaves her position as executive director of the Kermode Friendship Centre at the end of August to go to college.

Executive director at the centre since May 1989, she is tentatively scheduled to begin a business administration course at Northwest Community College in Prince Rupert — where she has a home — on September 9.

Parnell will hear at the end of the month whether or not she receives financial aid for college, but regardless she's "bound and determined to get into the program."

"I've enjoyed the work I'm doing (at the centre), but there's so many things opening up now that the sky's the limit."

The Friendship Centre's board has given her a leave of absence for the time being, and is accepting applications for a replacement.

City needs English program

A class at the Reading Place teaching English as a second language (ESL) was so popular that two more have been created, said coordinator Nat Purcell.

Those new classes began this week under the instruction of Heather Bellamy, a native of Usk who taught English in Pakistan and Italy before receiving her teaching certificate at Carleton University in Ottawa.

The Reading Place, set up under Project Literacy to promote literacy in Terrace, began teaching English after several requests for a course.

"It is a program that seems to have been needed for a long time in Terrace," Purcell pointed out. "So many people right at the beginning (of Project Literacy) came in hoping this was a place for ESL."

He said Bellamy's first class consisted of six people from Punjab and one person from Costa Rica.

"She seems to have established quite a rapport with the first students that they started bringing their friends along," said Purcell.

That's when The Reading Place decided to start two new classes.

Two beginner classes and an intermediate class are now offered. One beginner class is for people literate in their first language and another is for those who were never literate in the first language.

"It's a real challenge because that group is usually the one that falls through the cracks in a regular class," Bellamy said.

Participants in the new classes include three students from Skeens Junior Secondary and one from Caledonia Senior Secondary School.

An elementary family

Jean Gary Taille-Fer, 7, of Haiti now has an extended family in Terrace. That's because Thornhill Elementary School is sponsoring him and his family through the Foster Parents Plan.

The boy is one of ten children and lives in a two room apartment made of cement and covered with sheet iron. For furniture he and his family have one table, a few chairs beds and some household appliances. They cook using a small portable stove and charcoal and eat one meal a day.

Thornhill Elementary will keep up to date on Jean Gary and his parents' accomplishments through regular letters and reports.

Total rides high

Motorcyclists participating this June in the northwest component of the annual Ride for Sight raised more than $10,000 for eye research.

"That's the highest we've ever had in a northern B.C. ride," said James Gilham, northwestern coordinator.

The total of $10,040.45 amounted to more than one third of the provincial total, he added.

This year almost 10,000 motorcyclists across the country participated in the ride, which involves collecting donations for eye research throughout the year and transporting it to a collection point — the northwest point this year was Smithers.

The Ride for Sight is the largest money-raising event by motorcyclists in the world. Next year's Ride will be held in Kitimat.

Art courses offered

This fall Terrace area residents will be able to participate in visual art courses from the Emily Carr College of Art and Design in Vancouver — without travelling a block.

That's because they'll be offered Knowledge Network courses beginning in September.

The courses include a survey of western art, focussing on prehistoric, ancient, classical, Romanesque and Gothic art; an introduction to colour covering everything from mixing colour to using it in cooking; an exploration of images in communication; and an examination of painting and sculpture in Canada before 1871.

A second part of the survey of western art is offered in January and looks at art from the Renaissance until the present day.

Those wishing to participate in the course will be sent materials needed for the assignments, including texts, paint, paper and brushes.

To register, contact the Emily Carr College of Art and Design — at 1399 Johnston St., Vancouver, V6H 3R9 or by calling 884-3830 or 687-2345 — or the Open University — Box 94000, Richmond, V6X 1Z9 or by calling 660-2200 or 1-800-663-9711. Deadline for registration is August 22.

Riverboat Days start tomorrow

Riverboat Days '91 kicks off tomorrow and we look forward to a great time for tourists, visitors and especially for we home town folk.

All the events that we enjoyed in previous years are back again — with more.

For years now Terrace citizens have asked the Riverboat Days Committee, "Why don't you have a big bang up dance in conjunction with Riverboat Days?"

Well, if that's what the people of Terrace wanted, the committee wanted to supply it. And the golden opportunity came with Music '91.

Yes, my friends, this year Music '91 is sending us Guitars and Cadillacs, who will perform an hour-long show and then play for dancing in the Terrace Arena on August 3.

Riverboat Days

The doors open at 8 p.m. and the show starts at 9 p.m. Refreshments will be available.

Those of us who have already heard samples of the music to be performed are pleasantly impressed and suggest that you get out and grab any tickets left, and join your friends at the arena Saturday night.

Tickets are $15 and available only at Sight and Sound in the Skeena Mall.

You can't beat that for an evening out. Wear your Riverboat costumes or your regular clothes — just come out and enjoy.

Another treat for the musically inclined will be the presence of Mark Perry in the Band Shell in Lower Little Park Saturday and Sunday afternoon.

Mark is a very talented musician from the Smithers area who will be sharing his talents with us compliments of Music '91.

Shows will be at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. both days, so while you are enjoying all the weekend's activities being hosted in Lower Little Park you can grab yourself a snack at the Hungry Lion, pull up a square foot of Terrace, relax and enjoy Mark's music.

On Sunday you will want to set aside time to see the Esso Science Squad. Shows are at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m., with workshops following each show.

The Esso Science Squad is an outreach program from Science World B.C. It consists of four enthusiastic performers demonstrating some unusual and electrifying phenomena designed to entertain and intrigue audiences of all ages.

During the workshops, members of the audience will be given the opportunity to participate in experiments and to ask questions.

The squad will amuse and amaze us with such difficult to comprehend feats as mixing a fluid that catches fire but doesn't burn, making a three-foot bubble, making water disappear, lying on a bed of nails and many other experiments that will boggle the mind.

Don't miss them — it should be fun, interesting and educational — and the price is right.

Don't forget the fireworks on Friday night, the parade on Saturday and the Wild Duck Races on Monday. All in all it's going to be quite a weekend.

I would have to be twins to be at everything that is happening, but I will do my best — see you here there and everywhere in Terrace for Riverboat Days 1991.

Thanks

Dear Sirs;

On behalf of the Red Cross blood donor clinic, I would like to thank all the volunteers who came out to work at the clinic or did telephoning and the individuals, businesses and organizations who supplied the refreshments or assisted in many other ways.

July 10 was a very busy day with the last bed being packed away at 10 p.m. Anyone interested in the challenge of next year's event can phone me at 635-2158.

Again, many thanks to the residents of Terrace who made this 1991 clinic a huge success.

Lissi Sorensen,
Clinic chairman.

A firm foothold

Chrissy the Cockatoo has got her friend and personal climbing bars Gordon Misener in her grasp as she enjoys her day in Lower Little Park last Thursday. The eight-year-old bird is of the lesser sulphur crest variety and is extremely friendly. Because they are going away for too long a time to leave Chrissy, Misener and his family are searching for a new home for her.

The People

Help single parents

By SANDRA HARTFORD

Did you know that...high rates of divorce and increasing numbers of unmarried women with children mean that more families than ever before will be headed by a single parent. Many of us have, or will spend a period of our lives as single parents.

Being a single parent can be both challenging and rewarding. The greatest obstacle facing the single parent is usually financial. Money can be used to purchase adequate child care, suitable housing, and hired help for jobs that one person raising a family just can't find time for. Without money the job is much more difficult.

There are more single parents living in poverty than any other major group of Canadians. Many single parents are women, and women are often socialized towards obtaining lower education, and lower paying jobs. Getting a better education, improving finances, and adapting to a dual parent role, is a challenge for any single person with a family.

Some potential advantages for children from a single parent family are lack of sex-role stereotyping in their environment, more independence in self-care and decision-making, and the consistency of a one parent approach to discipline and family management.

Here are some things to think about if you are a single parent:

- Skeena Health Unit keeps a list of resources for families in our area, ie. Big Brothers and Sisters, Mothers Time Off, Nobody's Perfect, etc;

- Parenting courses provide an opportunity to share with others and keep a consistent parenting approach;

- Try to become involved in local groups that lobby for change in public policy, eg. antipoverty society, parents lobbying for 24 hour daycare and after-school care services, and single parent support groups.

Being a single parent is quite a job. If you know someone who is a single parent — lend a hand!

What are your questions and concerns? Write us at: "Did You Know That", Skeena Health Unit, 3412 Kalum St., Terrace, B.C. V8G 4T2.

Student to north

North to Alaska! That's where Nisga'a Elementary/Secondary school student Cynthia Gou will be heading this summer.

She is one of five B.C. native students to receive a provincial scholarship to spend six weeks at the University of Alaska Fairbanks where she will attend the Rural Alaska Honours Institute.

That program tackles the problem of under-representation of native students in post-secondary institutions by accepting academically promising grade 11 students and giving them a taste of university life.

While there, Gou will be taking courses in math, writing, native studies, engineering, education, business administration and biology.

TRAVEL TALK

DISCOVER MONTREAL

Montreal is a unique melange of the very best kind, combining history, music, theatre, the arts and sports — all in a safe, clean environment. And, as the world's third largest French speaking city, we offer a European flavour with all the advantages of a North American lifestyle.

In the winter months, while we generally have snow on the ground, we offer visitors a vacation style of their own choosing. From outdoor activities such as skating, tobogganing, cross-country skiing, or simply walking in the snow, to climate-controlled concerts, museums, exhibitions, nightlife, shopping, or dining, Montreal has something for every taste and every budget.

Not fond of winter weather? Several pedestrian corridors link various complexes to each other, with a larger network accessible through the use of the metro or, in some cases, by a short dash across the street. At last count there were half a dozen shopping centres housing approximately 1,400 boutiques, 140 restaurants of all price and gastronomic ranges, 30 theatres, 30 bank branches, several hotels and two department stores all connected in this integrated system. Both of our train stations, our intercity bus station, the Montreal Forum, the Olympic Stadium, Place des Arts and the Convention Centre are linked to the network.

Montreal is renowned as a shopper's paradise. The fashion capital of Canada and fur capital of the world, Montreal has an unmistakably European look, sophisticated and confident. From furs to household linens, from designer fashions to Inuit and Native Indian Art, if it can't be bought in Montreal, it probably doesn't exist.

TO MINIMIZE AIR POLLUTION FROM YOUR WOODSTOVE:

Firewood should be seasoned by splitting and stacking it at least eight months before it is burned. Your woodpile should be covered in a way that keeps rain and snow off but allows air to circulate through it. Dry, seasoned wood burns best!

Commies whine about pinks, sockeye

There are approximately a thousand gillnet and seine boats plying the migratory corridor for Skeena salmonids as I write this.

Business as usual in and around the mouth of the Skeena: another fishing season for an unwieldy net fishery in Area Four with the result that summer-run steelhead, coho as well as some runs of wild sockeye will be a year closer extinction.

Well not quite business as usual. All impacts considered, this is probably the largest commercial fishery for Skeena fish ever.

This is a grave situation. Anybody with a genuine concern for the health of Skeena salmon stocks should be thinking about ways to limit this kind of pressure. The collapse of the fishery — the kind of debacle we've already been witness to on the east coast and on river after river in Europe — is ultimately contrary to everybody's best interests.

Paddy Greene, CEO of the Prince Rupert Fishermen's Co-op, has larger concerns — bigger fish to fry. According to a recent Prince Rupert Daily News story, Paddy and his cohort Greg Taylor are "shocked and greatly disturbed" by the decision of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans to conduct a trial fishery for pinks and sockeye on the Skeena River.

"It's absolutely outrageous," whines Paddy. "It's a gratuitous reallocation of fish away from the commercial sector." Then he goes on to stress that such a fishery will keep valuable net species out of the nets of the commercial fleet.

When he stops huffing and puffing, Mr. Greene will have to show us where it is written that the resource belongs to the commercial fishermen. The

by Rob Brown

mandate of the federal fisheries department — reaffirmed in the Sparrow decision of the Supreme Court — says conservation of the stocks is paramount and the needs of aboriginal peoples is second, followed by those of sportsmen and commercial fishermen.

After reflecting on this, Mr. Greene should then consider the kind of impact the sportfisherman, with his puny rod and reel, is going to have on pinks and sockeye considering the latter are all but impossible to catch and the former are the most abundant species swimming up the river.

In reality, if all the sportsmen in the Skeena drainage spent every waking moment pounding the river for the highly prized sockeye, during the peak of the run, they'd be hard pressed to catch as many as one gillnetter gets in one good set. If Paddy Greene thinks this is not so, he should take up rod and reel and try to angle them himself.

And it is not just the honest angler who worries Mr. Greene:

"There are a lot of meat hunters out there who are going to jig illegally for sockeye," says one who, during his career aboard a fishing boat, has been known to hunt a fair bit of meat himself.

I try hard to find sense and meaning in this comment without success. Does Mr. Greene imagine there are bands of marauding snappers who have been waiting for a regulatory change by the DFO as a signal to skulk on down to the river and drag treble hooks over the backs of silvery sockeye? Why would they do that? Mr. Greene must surely know that Snappers, like creek robbers, are impervious to regulations.

Greg Taylor, of the North Coast Advisory Board, apparently shares Paddy Greene's phantom concerns about the trial fishery for pinks and sockeye. Letting representative sportfishermen — like this writer — monitor the fishery is "akin to letting the fox manage the hen house," according to Taylor. Mr. Taylor has the word of this particular fox that overlimiting is anathema to sportfishermen throughout the watershed and will be quickly reported when and if it occurs.

Forty years ago a handful of well-meaning but misguided sportfishermen in the B.C. Wildlife Federation — in a time when steelhead, chinook and coho were abundant and few sportsmen considered fishing for pinks or sockeye — suggested the latter might be designated "commercial fish." The commercial fishing sector pounced on the idea and has clung to it as if it were their birthright.

If Messrs. Greene and Taylor are worried about the extinction of pinks and sockeye, let them look in their own backyards.

Peaks' gym nearly done

TERRACE — The Terrace Peaks Gymnastics Club is almost ready to move into its new gym.

A little paint and some wiring is all that stands between the club and its first full-fledged gym in town.

The building — attached to the Thornhill Community Centre — is up and the club hopes it will be ready by the time its slate of programs starts in early September.

Until now the young gymnasts had been practising on school gym floors.

Erika Neves said the club is still looking for another $20,000 portion of its approved GO B.C. lottery grant, but the money hasn't arrived yet.

She said the planned opening — already set back three weeks from the original opening date of Aug. 1 — could end up being delayed past the start of the season if the grant money doesn't arrive soon.

"We're really counting on that right now," Neves said.

She said the club has planned several programs to start in September: the red/white/blue badge program, recreational program, Moms and Tots, a pre-school program for three- to five-year-olds, a midget rec 'A' program for up-and-coming competitors, and the competitive program.

Once the inside of the building is finished, they'll be able to put in the club's spring floor and its 42-foot-long floor-level trampoline.

They're also going to be holding a bottle drive soon to raise extra money for the club's activities.

Not dead yet

THE SKB WRECKERS' bats were hot Friday night as they continued to cling to third spot in the Terrace Men's Slow Pitch League with a 6-4 win over Westpoint Rentals. Westpoint took the early lead in that game, but lost it in the middle innings and was unable to mount any kind of comeback rally. The win put the Wreckers within a game and a half of second-place Westpoint and five games behind the league-leading pace of the Terrace Inn's squad.

Coxford cleans up

TERRACE — Terrace swimmer Garth Coxford blew away the field at the B.C. Championships, capturing five gold medals at UBC July 19-21.

"He totally demolished everybody," said Terrace Bluebacks swim coach Shelley Morgan. "In the events he came first, he came first by like about 10 metres. He was awesome."

Coxford won gold in the 400-metre freestyle, the 50-metre freestyle, the 100-metre freestyle, the 200-metre individual medley and the 100-metre butterfly.

He picked up a silver in the 100-metre backstroke, a bronze in the 50-metre breaststroke and finished fifth in the 50-metre butterfly.

Aimee Peacock also competed in the B.C. Youth Championships, finishing eighth in the 100-metre breaststroke.

It was the third major meet of the summer for the Bluebacks.

Denise Vanderlee, 16, and 15-year-old Tori MacKenzie also competed at the July 13-14 Senior Provincial Championships in Victoria.

The two had disappointing performances, however, because separate heats weren't run for some of the older more experienced competitors. "It was a hard meet — kind of demoralizing," said Morgan. "There were national team swimmers there that they had to compete head-to-head with."

Two more Terrace swimmers headed to Victoria July 5-7 for the B.C. Junior Provincials.

Thirteen-year-old Dave Vanderlee returned with a bronze medal and some impressive times in the face of tough competition.

He picked up a bronze in the 400-metre individual medley with his time of 5:42.25, and he was fifth in the 200-metre individual medley in a time of 2:45.04. In the 400-metre freestyle, he had another fifth-place time — 5:05.28.

Teammate Vince Gair swam the 100-metre backstroke in a time of 1:29.22, placing 21st.

Meanwhile, the swim club is waiting for the announcement of a new coach.

Current Bluebacks coach Shelley Morgan is returning to UBC this fall to take her fifth year in the university's teaching program.

Karate silver for Ling sister

TERRACE — Kitimat's Lisa Ling won three out of four fights to take the silver medal in women's sparring at the Pan-American Karate Championships June 28-30.

"I was really hungry for it," she said. "I've been training really hard. I also had to go on a diet and lose about six pounds to make lightweight division. So I was hungry — both mentally and physically."

The 20-year-old Ling narrowly lost her bid for the Pan-Am gold medal in kumite at the tournament to a competitor from Curacao.

"It was close," she said of the gold-medal round match. "Both of us had sort of the same fighting style. She would get a point and I would get a point, and it saw-sawed back and forth."

Ling was beaten 6-3, losing critical points when she mistimed the landing of one combination and was scored upon. In her earlier three victories, Ling battled back from behind several times to regain points before time ran out.

"My coaches and teammates really spurred me on," she said. "But myself, I knew that I had come all the way down there and I didn't come down there to lose."

"In karate, you have to have the technique and the ability — but a lot of it is in your mind too. You really have to want to win."

The Canadian team brought back two silver and five bronze medals.

"I was disappointed that the anthem wouldn't play for Canada, because it only plays for the gold medal winners," Ling said. "But next time it will."

Ling credits her instructor, David Akutugawa, and her family for their support. Her next tournament is the Canadian nationals in Richmond in mid-October. Ling starts law school at the University of B.C. in September.

Ball team battles back

TERRACE — They were up to bat, behind 12-6 in the final inning.

But Terrace's 16- to 18-year-old Senior Babe Ruth team struck back for six runs in that game against the East Kootenays at the July 18-22 provincial championships, forcing extra innings.

The evening game had already been delayed a few hours by rain, but nightfall just added to the determination of the Terrace players.

"At 1:20 a.m. Sunday morning, Terrace won by one run," said team coach Jim Fick. "They were pumped. They were really, really happy."

It was Game 2 of the provincial championships for the Terrace squad, and the clutch win was the high point of the tourney for them.

Starting pitcher Art Soares was named Terrace MVP that game, while Fick noted reliever Gary Peden — who was credited with the win — was also outstanding.

East Kootenay had come off a playing trip to Spokane, and sees considerably more competition than the Terrace team.

"Our guys have never played anybody — they're just a mixture of a couple of house league teams," said Fick.

The final score in that game was 16-13 for Terrace. After Terrace tied it at 12 in the seventh, both teams brought in three more runs in the eighth, and then Terrace scored the winner in the ninth.

Game 1 for Terrace at the tourney in Prince George saw them lose to Trail — last year's provincial champs — by a 9-1 score. Mark Neeve was MVP in that game.

Their third game was against Mid-Island, and they again lost 9-1.

"We didn't have any steam left, we didn't have anything left," Fick admitted.

Neeve was again picked as Terrace MVP. "He was hitting really well," Fick added.

The one-win, two-loss record didn't give Terrace a spot in the finals, but it was a moral victory and an indication of steady improvement for the team.

The provincial Senior Babe Ruth title went to Victoria, who defeated Mid-Island 11-9 in the final.

MIKE CHRISTENSEN, left, and teammates Paul Clark and Doug Mackenzie took first place in the men's team event in the Skeena Valley Triathlon July 14. Christensen was riding on an injured knee, and says that's pushed back his cycle training schedule.

Rider presses on

TERRACE — Mike Christensen's on the road again after a minor injury that laid the Terrace rider up for several days.

He was mountain biking the day before the Skeena Valley Triathlon and took a spill, bruising his kneecap.

"I probably shouldn't have raced in the triathlon, because it really aggravated it and I ended up losing a week and a half of training," Christensen said.

Although he didn't say anything about it on race day, the injury did make the triathlon more challenging for him.

"I had to ease up a bit," he explained. "I was in a lot of pain and I could feel my right leg cramping up on the ride down the airport hill."

But he's back on track now, racing this past weekend with fellow Terrace rider Chiron Kantakis in a 130-kilometre road race in Langley.

Next on his agenda is a four-stage race Aug. 3-5 in Prince George, which he says will be a training ride for the B.C. Championships Aug. 23-24 in Cranbrook.

"I'm really gunning for the B.C. Championships right now," he added.

Prior to that, he'll also be competing in a mountain bike race at Whistler-Blackcomb Aug. 11 and in the 100-mile Skeena River Challenge Century race from Prince Rupert to Terrace Aug. 18.

Hendry boosts Canada to silver

TERRACE — Michelle Hendry proved she's got national team talent at the World University Games.

The Terrace basketball player tied for second in Canadian national women's team scoring — with nine points — in Canada's silver medal-winning 70-65 victory over China last Wednesday.

Regina's Jackie Moore led team scoring with 10 points. The national team had earlier lost to Spain 81-74 in semi-final action. The U.S. beat Spain 88-62 for the gold.

Canada's men's basketball team also scored a silver medal, losing in the gold-medal round to the U.S. The Canadian medal tally was three gold, four silver and 11 bronze.

Hendry made the national team's travelling roster for the World University Games — which were held in Sheffield, England — but it's still uncertain whether she will be playing with the team at next month's Pan-American games in Cuba.

After the summer with the national team, she returns for her final year on Simon Fraser University's Clan women's hoop team.

In the past two seasons Hendry has led SFU to division titles and on into the national championship. This past season she was voted MVP by the coaches of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, and broke the SFU record for career points by a Clan player.

Sweet, sweet revenge

TERRACE — Avenging their vicious slaughter of a year ago, the media softball team took it to the Canada Employment Centre students in a re-match July 18.

After a couple of low-scoring innings, the students broke it open with five runs in the third, putting the Media Moguls on the run.

Led by a dedicated core of Terrace Standard players, the media team roster also included two CFTK players and a couple of borrowed students to fill out the roster.

Raj Ball was one of the last-minute student recruits, and his combination of spin-ball pitching and long ball hitting was definitely a factor in the media team's ultimate victory.

They waited until late in the game — the eighth inning to be exact — to mount the comeback.

Facing a 12-7 deficit as they went up to bat in the bottom of the eighth, it didn't look good.

But suddenly things started to click, and batters who had been consistently popping up started to drill shots to the mid-field holes.

Three runs scored, narrowing the gap to 13-10 by the time the media batters came up again in the bottom of the ninth.

That's when the Canada Employment Centre team reeled shell-shocked in the face of a barrage of blazing bats.

The media team — which had earlier been less than terrifying — exploded for seven runs in the bottom of the ninth, capping a stunning 17-10 come-from-behind victory.

The media team cycled through the entire batting order and then some in the incredible rally that just wouldn't die.

There are some murmurs of a rematch, but so far nothing is scheduled.

PROFILE

Mark MacLean

Rugby's holy roller

Some might say that with their undefeated record this season God smiled on Terrace's Northmen rugby team — especially if they knew a United Church minister was their outside centre.

He's Mark MacLean, a student of the Atlantic School of Theology at Halifax's Dalhousie University who's been in Terrace almost four months as a student minister at Knox United Church.

He says rugby is good training for his vocation because it is one of the most social sports around, and he can meet people he wouldn't otherwise meet.

"If my being a minister helps someone on the rugby team then great," he says. "And if not, being on a rugby team helps me be a minister."

MacLean first tried the sport in grade 10, playing ten-a-side at school.

By grade 12 his team had upped the count to 11-a-side, and in that year he played for New Brunswick at the junior national championships as fly half.

As soon as he arrived in Terrace this April he unpacked his cleats and found a rugby team to play with because he says — and every player will agree — it's not a sport it's a way of life.

The camaraderie is what he likes best about it.

"The ability to know that if you go to another town you'll meet a similar type of people," he explains. "A lot of the guys on the teams are great and the wives and kids are great."

Playing rugby in the northwest has its differences from playing on the east coast — like the distance the Northmen travel to play.

He said he couldn't believe they would drive two hours to Smithers for one game.

"And we weren't even staying over night."

Of course the land is not the same as it is in the east, either.

"Playing rugby is different for me with a mountain behind me," he says. "Everything is different with a mountain behind me."

MacLean leaves the mountains behind this month when he returns to Halifax for another eight months of school, followed by another four-month internship, hopefully abroad.

"He's a damn good player," says team spokesman David Hull. "We'll be sorry to see him go."

"Everybody assumes rugby players are a loud bunch of heathenous, beer-swilling pigs. Mark's proof that's just not true — at least the heathenous part."

RUGBY RULERS

NOBODY could touch them. The Terrace Northmen owned the North Coast Rugby Union this year, playing to an undefeated nine-win record. Terrace was originally slated to play 14 games, but difficulties in fielding teams in summer resulted in several match cancellations. The season's over now, but there's still action on the horizon. This weekend the Northmen play at the annual Smithers seven-a-side tourney.
